

A wooden shelving unit displaying a variety of ancient Greek pottery and artifacts. The shelves are filled with items such as vases, amphorae, plates, and small figurines. The items are arranged in a way that highlights their diversity and craftsmanship. The lighting is focused on the objects, making their details and colors stand out.

A wooden shelving unit on the left side of the gallery, displaying a collection of ancient Greek pottery. The items include several large vases and smaller vessels, some with decorative patterns. The shelves are arranged in a stepped fashion, allowing for a clear view of the objects.

A glass display case containing a collection of ancient Greek artifacts. The case is filled with various items, including a large, dark, rounded vessel, several smaller vessels, and a collection of small objects. The artifacts are arranged on a dark surface, and the case is illuminated from above. Below the case, there are informational panels with diagrams and text.

Informational panels on the wall, including a large map and several smaller diagrams of ancient Greek ships. The panels are framed in wood and contain text and illustrations. The text is in Greek, and the illustrations show various types of ancient Greek vessels, including triremes and quinqueremes.
